If we are to avoid future shocks in the competitive scientific and military race, it is important that we should be more fareighted in our planning and seize upon the assentials before others have shown us the potentialities of scientific developments.